

Top tips to help to keep jobs

In the near future we definitely will be job losses and increased competition – both with machines and with other professionals. That will not get left behind in the future?

Always learning

Given the loss of jobs, demand will be universal specialists, who will combine multiple professionals. Try to include their responsibilities more creative and responsible tasks – this will give you a competitive advantage in the future. For example, the same copywriter, which is threatened by automation, will greatly increase your employability, if in addition to writing skills master the basics of email marketing, or SMM.

Globalsources

The labour market in the future will have no regional or language restrictions, and hire employees from all over the world for various projects, will be commonplace. Today you can remotely operate with various companies. You need to know several foreign languages (at least English) and register at the international exchange of labor, such as Upwork or Outsourcely.

You can find a permanent job, to take is different every time orders or to work with multiple projects simultaneously. Self-organization and ability to work without being tied to a particular place, language, or the system will not be left without work in the future.

Fight your way

In the future employers will give preference to so-called go-getters, the most energetic and motivated candidates who are able to present themselves and stand out from the competition. Not enough to wait passively for a job offer, you need to win their place under the sun.

Did you know that Google hires more employees, who have not studied in College? A bright personality, motivation and persistence are now playing a lesser role than the diploma of higher education.

Learn code

It may sound a bit much, but in the future the concept of computer literacy will go beyond that we have available. The increase in the number of different technologies and their impact on our lives requires the ability to use them. Basic programming skills today will help the marketer and the designer and editor. If there are books on Javascript for 6-year-old children, probably, and you should have at least a General understanding of the case.

Socialized

Due to automation, people will have to deal with the fact that machines do not. There will be more creative professions, as well as posts involving work not with mechanisms, and with other people. Therefore, the ability to build relationships and find common ground will be useful. Now is the time to develop the emotional intelligence skills of networking and negotiating, because the career growth in the future depends on the ability to organize the work with people.

In the future, the work will turn out set pay for term paper writing of duties in set of skills and abilities.

Of course, it is impossible in one day to learn to think outside the box, be creative and find a common language with people, but be ready to change in the future – a requirement.